IHA’s P4P program is the largest physician incentive program in the United States. The goal of the program is to enable physician groups to receive financial rewards from participating health plans based on quality measures for clinical care, patient experience, and use of information technology.

“Quality measured against evidence-based guidelines is the cornerstone of effective healthcare,” said Wells Shoemaker, MD, and Medical Director of the California Association of Physician Groups (CAPG). “I applaud these top performers who have raised the bar for other physician groups in California.”

Today's announcement is based on an analysis of the 2005 P4P measurement year, in which 228 physician groups participated, with The Permanente Medical Group (Kaiser Permanente's Northern California physician groups) and Southern California Permanente Medical Group (Kaiser Permanente's Southern California physician groups) reporting results for the first time. With the addition of Kaiser, data from approximately 40,000 physicians who care for more than 12 million individuals were tallied to calculate which physician groups made the top 20% cut. Seven major health plans (Aetna Healthcare of California, Blue Cross of California, Blue Shield of California, CIGNA HealthCare of California, Health Net of California, PacifiCare of California, and Western Health Advantage) participate in rewarding participating physicians with P4P incentive payments.

In July, IHA announced across-the-board improvements by physician groups on P4P evidence-based clinical care measures, as well as increased use of information technology for activities such as prescribing, monitoring lab results, preventive and chronic care reminders, and electronic messaging. Compared to 2004, physician groups reported that in 2005 they screened about 60,000 more women for cervical cancer, tested nearly 12,000 more individuals for diabetes, and administered approximately 30,000 more childhood immunizations.

"This means that across California, children are more likely to get the immunizations they need, adults are more likely to get screened for cancers and diabetes, and chronic conditions are more likely to be managed. The patients are the real winners," said Tom Williams, executive director of IHA. "These physician groups have distinguished themselves by providing care for their patients at the highest levels compared to their peers on comparable benchmarks."

Names of the top performing groups will be posted on IHA's website at www.iha.org. Due to some methodology changes and timing issues, the winners will be posted on the IHA site this year, rather than on the Office of the Patient Advocate website, <http://www.opa.ca.gov>. OPA will provide a link to the IHA website to ensure that consumers will have easy access to the information.

The Integrated Healthcare Association (IHA) is a not-for-profit statewide collaborative leadership group of California health plans, physician groups, and health care systems, plus academic, consumer, purchaser, pharmaceutical and technology representatives that promotes quality improvement, accountability, and affordability for the benefit of all California consumers through special projects, policy innovation, and education.
